

A new homepage, built around the two things you asked us to fix.

Here is a first look. Nothing is final. This is for you to react to, and everything on it can change. The colours are taken straight from your existing website, along with your logo and your own photographs.

“People think we install pipe.”

The new page says you are a distributor three times before a visitor scrolls: in the bar above your logo, directly under the headline, in “We supply the contractors who do the work. We do not perform installations.”, and again in a short list of what you do and what you never do. It is also written into the page’s hidden code, so Google and AI search repeat it back correctly.

“Nobody can find us.”

The site is built to load fast and be read properly by Google. Every product will sit on its own page with its specs, safety sheets and manuals attached, which is what people actually search for. We have also left room to sell online later, so you will not need to pay to rebuild the site when you are ready.

WHAT IS ON THE PAGE

- A pipe size picker at the top. A visitor taps the size they are lining and sees straight away how many products fit it. The finder further down the page carries that answer over. This is the part we would most like your reaction to.
- Your seven product lines, ten of your products, and four of your photographs a visitor can switch between in the hero.
- Training, demos, technical support and equipment repair, given their own space, because that is what competitors do not offer.
- Upcoming demos and events, plus your spec sheets, SDS, TDS and manuals.
- A question box in the corner that answers the common ones straight away: what you stock, pipe sizes, delivery, training, opening hours. It gives your phone number with every answer.
- A quote request form asking for name, company and phone number, with your phone number on every screen.

What we need from you

1. Tell us what you like and what you do not. Blunt is helpful.
2. Confirm your address and opening hours. We have assumed Puyallup, WA.
3. Send your product list and spec sheets in whatever format you have them. The prices, stock levels and part numbers on the page right now are stand-ins.
4. Confirm we can use the manufacturer logos, or we will keep them as plain text.
